

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE

A PEOPLE OF TRUST? [from Soul Matters materials, edited for UUUFM]

In religious congregations, “trust” and “faith” intertwine. Faith assures some that life will look after us. For instance, our Christian friends sing hymns about God “watching over us” and keeping “an eye on the sparrow.” Our Jewish friends lift up the Exodus story to encourage faith that God will help us make our way even when things look bleak. Likewise, prayer practice for our Muslim friends is all about reminding oneself that you are in Allah’s safe hands. We UUs translate similar sentiments using the language of trusting “a Love that will not let us go.”

This call to trust Life’s support comes to us as a gift. After all, it’s all too easy to convince ourselves that life is a foe. So, we need our faith communities to restore our faith that life is ultimately a friend. We need the reassurance. We need to know that when we fall we can count on being picked up.

But what about being pushed? Don’t we need to count on that too? A Love that won’t let us go is essential, but isn’t it just as important to have faith in a Love that won’t let us get too comfortable? Especially as we welcome in Black History Month, we certainly don’t want to forget about a Love that disturbs. We need a Love that promises to not let privilege remain hidden, and unsettles those who have it. A Love that tells those of us who are marginalized and tired, “I won’t let your pain be ignored.”

And just when that call to trust seems the one we all need to listen to, another voice adds itself to the mix. This one telling us to trust that it’s not all up to us. That sometimes it’s ok to rest. That doesn’t disturb but instead assures us that we can let go. That tells us to trust that we can—for a while—put the work down because others are ready to pick it up, knowing that we will be there to pick it up when rest calls to them.

So, friends, where does that leave us?

Which is it? Trust life to pick us up? Trust life to push and poke us? Trust that it’s ok to put the work down for a while?

It is all of them, of course. And more.

But maybe it’s mostly about trusting that we’ll know which call is right for us. Maybe it’s about having faith in ourselves and not letting anyone tell us what we need to trust.

There’s no single way to see trust. Everyone’s heart is wrestling with a loss of faith in its own way. The trust you need to repair is likely different than mine. That’s the magic of Unitarian Universalism. We support one another on our individual spiritual journeys. That’s what builds a community of trust for us all.

FEBRUARY 2019 SUNDAY SERVICES

OUR THEME IN FEBRUARY EXPLORES
"WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE A PEOPLE OF TRUST?"

FEBRUARY 3 "IN _____ WE TRUST"

Rev Jonalu Johnstone speaks. This is a SERVICE FOR ALL AGES. If you wouldn't put "God" in the blank, what would you claim? Life requires trust because too much is unpredictable. But what is worthy of trust? How do you figure out what should be trusted, and what to question, or even let go of? We'll explore what we trust--and why. Convener is Madilena Mendiola at madilenam@gmail.com.

Members and friends are encouraged to stay following the service on FEBRUARY 3, to participate in a FEEDBACK CIRCLE. We want to hear your thoughts and suggestions about our Sunday services. Your input helps us continue to improve Sunday mornings. Snacks will be provided. Please let us know if you'll need childcare while we meet.

FEBRUARY 10 "ARE WE REALLY MADE OF STAR STUFF?"

Physicist and longtime Fellowship member Larry Weaver joins us. This service was originally scheduled in November, but cancelled due to unsafe weather conditions. Now, we have another opportunity to experience one of Larry's always thoughtful, engaging, and enlightening presentations. Convener is Dick Beeman at 317-7576 or rbeeman@cox.net.

FEBRUARY 17 "TRUST THE PROCESS: LET GO OF THE RESULTS"

Few (if any) of us have ended up living the life we planned for ourselves, yet we still ask children what they want to be when they grow up. What if we let go of the idea that it matters? Join Salina UU Lay Leader Barb Gutsch in exploring the ever-changing journey that we are taking to places we could never even have imagined. Mark Mayfield, at 776-6495 or ferguson.mayfield@gmail.com, convenes.

FEBRUARY 24 "RESTORING TRUST AFTER A BREACH"

Reverend Jonalu Johnstone presents the reflection. In this Black History Month, we'll use the experience of the Empowerment Controversy in the UUA in the 1960's as a case study for the breaking of trust and the slow, deliberate rebuilding that broken trust requires. This work has implications for all the covenants of our lives--from the personal covenants like marriage to the social covenants like nations. Dave Lambert, at 587-8750 or david.k.lambert@gmail.com, convenes.

As we approach Valentine's Day in this era of #metoo, trust may be a good thing to think about in our personal lives. We've witnessed tremendous violations of trust in the public sphere, and the reports just keep on coming.

For most us, though, trust doesn't feel like a public issue, or even a theological issue; it feels personal. In our daily lives, questions of trust are about who we can count on and who we don't expect to come through for us. And the answers are sometimes surprising.

Those who have experienced abuse from people close to them--partners, parents, or friends--can develop attitudes of mistrust not only for those who have violated them, but for people in general as well. Who can blame them? Trust too often has led to harm.

But what is love without trust? Risking love may be the greatest risk we take in our lives. Often, that risk is rewarded. Sometimes, it isn't. The hurt from that experience may never fully heal. When trust has been broken, relationships fail, families dissolve, friendships falter. And the people going through that brokenness become broken themselves. The Irish proverb tells us, "When mistrust comes in, love goes out." We can't really have love without trust.

And trust works best as a two-way street. We have to trust one another, though often one person has to make the leap to trust first. Or maybe, we slowly inch towards trusting one another, tiny step by tiny step. We may not even realize when we came to trust someone, until one day we notice that we do. Mutuality, consistency, steadfastness--that is the language of trust.

Maybe we'd rather have roses, candy, and candlelight. They are ephemeral, though. And studies show that couples who do best in the long-run are not those with the greatest romantic impulses, but the ones who day after day come through in the little ways. Caring enough to ask one another about their day. Listening. Expressing thanks. Some people talk about it in terms of an emotional bank account, making continual deposits so that the account grows and can stand up to the difficult times that may require withdrawals, testing the love and the trust. As someone in a relationship for more than thirty years, I can attest to that.

Buddhist neuroscientist Rick Hanson tells us that early humans who were particularly good at cooperation, caring, and understanding--in short, love--outcompeted those bands who loved less. Love, then, has staying power. Still, it's nothing with trust.

In this month of trust, focus on those you love and build the trust. It's worth the effort, I promise you.
